REGIONAL WEATHER SUMMARY

Batten down the hatches!!! The high pressure ridge is pushed out by a deep, and well organized low pressure system that makes its way in from the west. Expect winds to pickup throughout the early part of the day before hitting max gusts later as a trough pushes through. There is a slight respite overnight before the winds once again pickup as the low moves in. Reduced visibility in snow and blowing snow expected throughout, with periods of probably near zero. Significant wave action can be expected.
