PALMER STATION WEATHER FORECAST INFORMATION

THIS INFORMATION IS FOR OFFICIAL USE ONLY
AND IS LIMITED TO ACTIVITIES SPONSORED OR RECOGNIZED BY THE UNITED STATES ANTARCTIC PROGRAM

REGIONAL WEATHER SUMMARY

A high pressure ridge persists over the northern Antarctic Peninsula through the forecast period as a low pressure system moving in from the northeast is forced through the Drake Passage tomorrow. Indications are for light winds with periods of fog and precipitation reducing visibility this morning through early afternoon. Expect east-southeast winds and favorable conditions with decreasing temperatures under high pressure tonight and tomorrow. Winter solstice today at 1157 local time.
